PITTSBURGH, PA (August 10, 2011)—City Theatre has announced the launch of City Events, a new special presentation series kicking off to supplement the 2011/12 season. City Events includes three comedy specials never before seen in Pittsburgh: Seth's Big Fat Broadway Show, featuring Sirius/XM Radio sensation Seth Rudetsky (October 27-30, 2011); Oy Vey in a Manger, a wickedly funny holiday show courtesy of The Kinsey Sicks (December 8-11, 2011); and Why I'm Scared of Dance by Jen Childs (February 2-12, 2012), a one-woman comic hit that took Philadelphia by storm.

Seth's Big Fat Broadway Show | October 27-30, 2011
On the Hamburg Studio Stage

Based on his hit Sirius/XM Radio show, the larger than life and renowned Seth Rudetsky shares (and sings!) his sassy and irreverent Broadway knowledge with City Theatre audiences for only five amazing performances!

Oy Vey in a Manger | December 8-11, 2011

On the Mainstage

Brace yourself for a limited-engagement holiday show like no other. The Kinsey Sicks, "America's favorite dragapella beautyshop quartet," brings its critically-acclaimed showcase of gut-busting parodies and raucous schtick to the South Side. With songs like "Tis the Season to Drink Stoli," "Harried Little Christmas," and "God Bless Ye Femmy Lesbians," they blend glorious four-part harmonies with campy and outrageous humor.

Why I'm Scared of Dance by Jen Childs | February 2-12, 2012

On the Hamburg Studio Stage

Jen Childs stars in her hilarious and heartwarming one-woman comedy, where she proves that working at the barre is not nearly as much fun as working at the bar and teaches you how to turn the choreography life gives you into the dance you were born to perform.
